

Biography

At an early age, Mark DeGraffenried developed a passion for art. While attending high school in Alaska, he won state wide acclaim for his sculpture "Regret". Recognition including numerous "Best of Show" and purchase awards for his sculpture continued into his college career and beyond. His sculpture is noted for its artistic style, grounded with an in-depth knowledge of the human form, and his ability to represent accurate likenesses of those individuals he portrays.

At an early age, Mark DeGraffenried developed a passion for art. While attending high school in Alaska, he won state wide acclaim for his sculpture "Regret". Recognition including numerous "Best of Show" and purchase awards for his sculpture continued into his college career and beyond. His sculpture is noted for its artistic style, grounded with an in-depth knowledge of the human form, and his ability to represent accurate likenesses of those individuals he portrays.

DeGraffenried's knowledge of the sculpting process is extensive, from the creation in clay and wax casting process, to the final bronze and patina work. DeGraffenried strives to create interest and emotion within each sculpture. "My greatest challenge as a sculptor is to capture the integrity of the human spirit, to convey the experiences of life and all aspects of emotion."

DeGraffenried attended Brigham Young University Idaho, Brigham Young University Hawaii, and received a bachelor degree with honors from Utah State University in 1993. Since graduation he has been awarded several large scale bronze commissions. His largest project entailed an edition of four life-size bronzes of an emigrant family, The Crossing, that were placed in prominent locations in England and Salt Lake City. DeGraffenried is a member of the Alliance for the Varied Arts, and the National Sculpture Society. His work includes many limited editions, portrait busts, medallions and other figurative work.

DeGraffenried lives in Logan, Utah, where he finds inspiration for his current work.
